

Pre-Production document

The idea behind my project, which I unfortunately could not complete due to time constriction, was a Spotify page prototype. The idea was that it could make a user sign up and then his username/ hashed passwords get input into a superbase database, and an authorized user can then get the ability to upload music to the website and/ even like an already uploaded song.

But I resulted to using superbase to only output names of songs, musician, streams, and song length. Which is pretty cool!

I made use of next.js as my JavaScript-based framework, I got some inspiration from a YouTube video, I also made use of Tailwind as the CSS framework.

Below is an image of the wireframe/comp design of what I envisioned the website will turn out to be.
